On the Cover: This month's cover image is entitled, Waking Up. It was created by Eugenia Bravo, MA, a recent graduate of the George Washington University art therapy program. Bravo works as a special projects intern with the American Art Therapy Association, assisting in conference and membership operations, as well as state licensure advocacy efforts and other community projects.

According to the artist, "Waking Up is part of a series I created exploring the unique bond between mothers and children. This specific drawing was inspired by my own son and our love and attachment, and how love can heal us and push us through the challenges of parenting."

As an immigrant from Argentina, Bravo strives to use her experiences in her work with women and children, healing families who have experienced separation, and empowering individuals to grow. Her passion for art therapy comes in part due to her own journey and the ways that she has found the process of creation to be inherently healing.

This image is part of the Featured Member series of the American Art Therapy Association (AATA), a non-profit professional association with the mission to lead the nation in the advancement of art therapy as a regulated mental health and human services profession. The series showcases individual art therapists as well as their own artwork and brings to life the everyday work art therapists do in a variety of settings serving clients from all walks of life. Explore more of the series at arththerapy.org/featured-members.
